HISTORIC AIRPLANES

by Holger Steinle and Astrid Venn

CONTENT:

Flying has always been one of mankind's greatest desires. With the invention of aircraft, this dream became a reality. The exhibition "From Ballooning to the Berlin Airlift" at the Deutsche Technikmuseum in Berlin displays important developments and events from around 200 years of German aviation history, starting with the first balloon ascents at the end of the 18th century up until the early years of the post-war period.

The objects have been assembled from around the world since the foundation of the museum in 1982. The more than 40 aircraft and large-scale objects on display document far more than just how the technology developed, and include details about the many different ways the planes were used and of the fates of the people who worked with or came into contact with them.

This beautifully illustrated coffee table book will appeal to all aviation enthusiasts interested in valuable unique objects and rare classics of Germany's vivid aviation history.
